

20 Petite Soundtracks from Imaginary Films

In a long career composing for film, TV and games I have learned to think cinematically at all times when making music. Even when not composing for existing visuals, I always have a picture, a place, or a situation in my mind that goes with the music. Letting my imagination run wild, I often concoct little films in my head to accompany the music. Sometimes they are live-action films, but more often they are animated. As a huge fan of animation, particularly anime, I find myself bringing these kinds of characters and situations to life in my imaginary "scores".

The 20 pieces on this album are examples of the above. Miniature scores to films that don't exist, except in my head. I have named them according to the imagery in my mind when composing, but also as the cues for an actual film might be named on a soundtrack album. I hope you enjoy these little delights as much as I enjoyed making them.

Many thanks to all the fabulous musicians of Lushwood Hills that contributed to this record. Be warned, I shall return the favour! And thanks to Sublamental for being so patient!

Cheers,

Art Bevilaqua
